Jerry Walker has been the head coach for the Chicago Islanders for the last eight years. On August 23, 2007, Mr. Walker will be inducted into the prestigious Basketball Hall of Fame. Mr. Walker agreed to sit down with Sports World to discuss his remarkable career.

Interviewer: So, what does it take to be a professional coach?

Mr. Walker: Actually, a lot of people ask me that, and I always tell them the same thing: work, work, and more work. People are always surprised by my answer.

Interviewer: Most people probably think that your job is pretty easy, am I right?

Mr. Walker: They see me on TV and get the impression that my life is glamorous. The reality of being a professional coach, however, is that you have to be able to multi-task and perform under pressure. I'm like a business manager and athletic trainer, all in one package. I develop training programs for my athletes, investigate other teams' training habits, hire staff, fire staff, schedule practice sessions, consult with injured players, and negotiate contracts with new players.

Interviewer: That does sound like a lot of work for one man. What does your wife think of your career?

Mr. Walker: Well, she wants me to teach in a university like she does rather than work as a coach. She worries about my health and doesn't like the fact that we can't spend much time together. I just love to see athletes excel, and to know that I had something to do with their success. That's what I want the most.

Interviewer: What would you change about your job, if you could?

Mr. Walker: I wish I had more time to coach amateur players, like high school and college athletes. I think it's important to develop the skills of up-and-coming athletes, not just ones who sign a contract with us.

Câu 828. Why are many surprised about Jerry Walker's work?

A. It is not as easy as it appears to be

B. It pays less than most people expect

C. It doesn't require previous experience

D. It benefits disadvantaged athletes

Câu 829. What is NOT one of Mr. Walker's responsibilities?

A. Hiring new employees

TUYENCONGCHUC.VN

B. Providing a training schedule

C. Recruiting new players

D. Attending athletic conferences

Câu 830. What is Mr. Walker's wife's profession?

A. She is an athletic trainer

B. She is an executive manager

C. She is a professor

D. She is an athletic recruiter

Câu 831. What does Mr. Walker like most about his job?

A. He loves the competition

B. He likes to help athletes succeed

C. He enjoys traveling with his team

D. He gets to be on television

Câu 832. What would Mr. Walker like to be able to do?

A. Work with younger athletes

B. Spend more time with his team

C. Attend fewer media events

D. Reduce his managerial responsibilities

In developing countries, people are sometimes unaware of the importance of education, and there is economic pressure from those parents who prioritize their children's, making money in the short term over any long-term benefits of education. Recent studies on child labor and, poverty have suggested that when poor families reach a certain economic threshold where families are able to provide for their basic needs, parents return their children to school. This has been found to be true, once the threshold has been breached, even if the potential economic value of the children's work has increased since their return to school

TUYENCONGCHUC.VN

Other problems are that teachers are often paid less than other professions; a lack of good universities and a low acceptance rate for good universities are evident in countries with a relatively high population density.

India has launched EDUSAT, an education satellite that can reach remote parts of the country at a greatly reduced cost. There is also ail initiative supported by several major corporations to develop a $100 laptop. The laptops have been available since 2007. The laptops, sold at cost, will enable developing countries to give their children a digital education. In Africa, an "e-school program" has been launched to provide all 600,000 primary and high schools with computer equipment, learning materials and internet access within 10 years. Volunteer groups are working to give more individuals opportunity to receive education in developing countries through such programs as the Perpetual Education Fund. An International Development Agency project started with the support of American President Bill Clinton uses the Internet to allow co-operation by individuals on issues of social development.

Câu 833. In developing countries, _____.

A. people all know that education is very important all the time

B. all parents are rich enough to send their children to school

C. children have rights to get high schooling

D. children have to work instead of going to school

Câu 834. According to recent studies, when parents are able to overcome their financial difficulty, _____.

A. they send their children back to school

B. they still make their children continue working

C. they have their children work even harder

D. they themselves continue their schooling

Câu 835. In populous countries, _____.

A. teaching is the highest-paid career

B. there are a lot of good universities

C. there is a lack of good universities

TUYENCONGCHUC.VN

D. no other careers are better paid than teaching

Câu 836. The third paragraph is about _____.

A. an Indian education satellite

B. the projects to computerize education in developing countries

C. the computerization of African education

D. President Bill Clinton who bought a lot of computers

Câu 837. How many projects are presented in the third paragraph?

A. one

B. two

C. three

D. four

Harry Houdini

He began his magic career in 1891. At the outset, he had little success. He performed in sideshows, and even doubled as "The Wild Man" at a circus. Houdini focused initially on traditional card tricks. At one point, he billed himself as the "King of Cards". But he soon began experimenting with escape acts.

In 1893, while performing with his brother, Dash, at Coney Island as "The Brothers Houdini", Harry met a fellow performer, Wilhelmina Beatrice "Bess" Rahner. She and Houdini married in 1894, with Bess replacing Dash in the act, which became known as "The Houdinis." For the rest of Houdini's performing career, Bess would work as his stage assistant.

Houdini's big break came in 1899 when he met manager Martin Beck in rural Woodstock, Illinois. Impressed by Houdini's handcuffs act, Beck advised him to concentrate on escape acts and booked him on the Orpheum vaudeville circuit. Within months, he was performing at the top vaudeville houses in the country. In 1900, Beck arranged for Houdini to tour Europe. After some days of unsuccessful interviews in London, Houdini managed to interest Dundas Slater, then manager of the Alhambra Theatre. He gave a demonstration of escape from handcuffs at Scotland Yard, and succeeded in baffling the police so effectively that he was booked at the Alhambra for six months.

Derren Brown

Derren Brown is a British illusionist, mentalist, trickster, hypnotist, painter, writer, and sceptic. He is known for his appearances in television specials, stage productions, and British television series such as Trick of the Mind and Trick or Treat. Though his performances of mind-reading and other feats of mentalism may appear to be the result of psychic or paranormal practices, he claims no such abilities and frequently denounces those who do. Brown states at the beginning of his Trick of the Mind programmes that he achieves his results using a combination of "suggestion, psychology, misdirection and showmanship".

Brown was born to Bob and Chris Brown in Purley, Croydon, London, England. He has a brother, who is nine years his junior. Brown was privately educated at Whitgift School in South Croydon (where his father coached swimming), and studied Law and German at the University of Bristol. While there, he attended a hypnotist show by Martin Taylor, which inspired him to turn to illusion and hypnosis as a career. Whilst an undergraduate, he started working as a conjuror, performing the traditional skills of close-up magic in bars and restaurants. In 1992, he started performing stage shows at the University of Bristol under the stage name Darren V. Brown.

Brown was an Evangelical Christian in his teens, and became an atheist in his twenties. Brown said he sought to strengthen his belief and provide answers to common criticisms of religion by reading the Bible and other Christian religious texts, but upon doing so found none of the answers he sought and came to the conclusion that his belief had no basis.

Joseph Dunninger

Dunninger was born in New York City. He headlined throughout the Keith-Orpheum Circuit, and was much in demand for private entertainment. At the age of seventeen he was invited to perform at the home of Theodore Roosevelt in Oyster Bay and at the home of the inventor Thomas A. Edison, both of whom were avid admirers of his mysticism.

Dunninger was a debunker of fraudulent mediums. He claimed to replicate through trickery all spiritualist phenomena. He wrote the book Inside the Medium's Cabinet which exposed the tricks of mediumship. He also exposed how the indian rope trick could be performed by camera trickery.

Dunninger had a standing offer of $10,000 to anyone who could prove that he used paid assistants for his tricks. He often said he could raise that offer to $100,000. Through Scientific

TUYENCONGCHUC.VN

American magazine and the Universal Council for Psychic Research, Dunninger made this offer to any medium who could produce by psychic or supernatural means any physical phenomena that he could not reproduce by natural means. Dunninger appeared on radio starting in 1943, and on television frequently in the 1950s and 60s.

Câu 838. Which magician went to have a lot of success abroad?

A. Brown

B. Houdini

C. Dunninger

D. Belief

Câu 839. Which magician enjoyed showing other performers were dishonest?

A. Houdini

B. Painter

C. Dunninger

D. Brown

Câu 840. Which magician enjoyed media success late in his career?

A. Houdini

B. Hypnotist

C. Dunninger

D. Brown

Câu 841. Which magician had ambitions to work in magic after seeing another performer?

A. Brown

B. Dunninger

C. Houdini

D. Hypnotist

Câu 842. Which magician was initially a failure?

A. Houdini

Câu 844. Which magician worked with a family member?

A. Brown

B. Hypnotist

C. Dunninger

D. Houdini

Câu 845. Which magician was already performing before becoming an adult?

A. Houdini

B. Brown

C. Dunninger

D. Hypnotist

Most earthquakes are caused by large-scale movements of the Earth's lithospheric plates and occur at the boundaries between the plates. Experts recognize seven to twelve major plates and a number of smaller ones. The plates take their names from continents (the North American plate): from oceans (the Pacific plate): and from geographic areas (the Arabian plate).

Slow and steady Motion

The plates are in very slow but constant motion, so that seen from above, the earth's surface might look like a slowly moving spherical jigsaw puzzle. The plates move at rates of 2 to 15 cm or several inches in a year, about as fast as our fingernails grow. On a human scale, this is a rate of movement that only the most sophisticated instruments can detect. But on the scale of geological time, it's a dizzying speed. At this rate, those almost-four-billion-year old rocks could have traveled all the way around the Earth eleven times.

The movement of the plates is generally one of three kinds: spreading, colliding or sliding. When plates are spreading, or separating from each other, we call their movement divergent. When they are colliding, or pushing each other, we call the movement convergent. Movement in which plates slide past each other is called lateral (or transform) plate movement. Earthquakes can accompany each of the three types of movement.

Plate Tectonics

The revolutionary theory of plate tectonics originated early in the 20th century, although it did not gain general acceptance until the late 1960s. The German meteorologist, geophysicist, and explorer Alfred L Wegener is now given credit for the first step in understanding the movement of the lithosphere. In the period 1910-1912 he formulated the theory called continental drift and collected evidence from the rocks, fossils, and climate of various continents to show that they had once been joined together. Wegener had little data on the oceanic crust, so he thought that the continents merely moved through that crust.

Câu 846. Earthquakes occur when what parts of the tectonic plates collide?

A. the peaks

B. the centres

C. the edges

Câu 847. Tectonic plates can get their names from what?

A. rivers

B. cities

C. seas

Câu 848. Why is the phrase "jigsaw puzzle" used in the second paragraph?

A. because of the number of plates

B. because of the way the plates fit together

C. to show how complex everything is

TUYENCONGCHUC.VN

Câu 849. Why have the plates travelled so far?

A. because they are moving quite fast

B. because of the age of the Earth

C. because Earth is not very big

Câu 850. Can earthquakes be caused when plates are moving away from each other?

A. No

B. Yes

C. only if they are touching

Câu 851. Why did Wegener's theory take so long to be accepted?

A. he had no understanding of the ocean floor

B. it was very different from previous ideas in this area

C. he made several errors in his theory

Câu 852. What evidence did Wegener NOT use to support his theory of Continental Drift when looking at two now-distant locations?

A. the existence of similar races of people

B. the existence of similar extinct animals

C. the existence of similar rocks

For centuries, the common view of how domestication had occurred was that prehistoric people, realizing how useful it would be to have captive herds of food animals, began capturing wild animals and breeding them. Over time, by allowing only animals with "tame" characteristics to mate and produce offspring, human beings created animals that were less wild and more dependent upon people. Eventually this process led to the domestic farm animals and pets that we know today, many of which would fare quite badly in the wild, having lost their ancient survival skills and instincts.

Recent research suggests that this view of domestication is incomplete. Prehistoric human beings did capture and breed useful wild animals, and those species became tamer over time (they generally changed physically, too, developing larger bodies and smaller brains than their wild cousins). But specialists in animal behavior now think that domestication was not simply something people did to animals - the animals played an active part in the process. Wolves and wild horses, for example, may have taken the first steps in their own domestication by hanging around human settlements, feeding on people's garbage and crops and getting used to human presence and activity. Individual animals that were not too nervous or fearful to live near people produced offspring that also tolerated humans, making it easier for people to capture and tame them.

In this version, people succeeded in domesticating only animals that had already adapted easily to life around humans. Domestication required an animal that was willing to become domestic. The process was more like a dance with two partners than a triumph of humans over animals.

At first glance, the taming of cats seems to fit nicely into this new story of domestication. A traditional theory says that after prehistoric people in the Near East and Egypt invented agriculture and started farming, rats and mice gathered to feast on their stored grain. Wildcats, in turn, gathered at the same places to prey on the rats and mice. Over time, cats got used to people and people got used to cats, until at some point cats were tame. New studies of wildcats, however, seem to call this theory into question. Wildcats don't share hunting and feeding territories, and they don't live close to people or seek out human settlements as food sources. Experts do not know whether wildcats were partners in their own domestication. They do know that long after people had acquired domestic dogs, sheep, goats. cattle, and horses, they somehow acquired tame cats. By mating the least aggressive cats with one another, they produced animals with increasingly tame qualities.

Câu 853. What is suggested in the new theory?

A. that animals were less afraid than thought

B. that wolves and horses were the first to be domesticated

C. that animals had an active role in their domestication

Câu 854. Why is the word "dance" used in the 3rd paragraph?

A. that animals and humans were close

B. that it was complex and not simple to understand

C. there were two active partners

TUYENCONGCHUC.VN

Câu 855. What probably attracted cats to human settlements?

A. food

B. warmth

C. other cats

Câu 856. What characteristic of the cat causes a problem for the theory that cats were domesticated like wolves were?

A. independence

B. greed

C. friendliness

Câu 857. According to traditional theories of domestication, how were wild animals tamed?

A. aggression and control

B. capturing only smaller animals

C. selective breeding

Constellations are patterns of stars in the sky. Over many thousands of years, human beings living on the Earth have looked up and seen the shapes of people, animals and everyday objects - they 'joined the dots' of the stars to form patterns in the sky. They gave these shapes names, some of which we still use today. But why did they bother with constellations at all? One reason is that having constellations makes it easier to find your way around the sky. This is useful for finding north, or working out the date or the time. When there were no compasses, clocks or watches, this was all very important.

There is another reason why constellations were so important. Imagine going back to a time before paper and pencil had been invented. Life was sparse. If you wanted to draw a picture, you had to scratch it out on a dark cave wall or write it in sand that could blow away. But at night an amazing pattern of bright specks of light would appear above your head. By joining the dots you could see almost any picture you wanted. You could imagine seeing your favourite shapes in the sky. You might tell others about the constellations you have made up. They might tell others, and your constellation could be passed down from generation to generation for hundreds or even thousands of years. This is how many of the constellations got the names we use.

Seasons

You don't see exactly the same part of the sky every night, though between one night and the next you won't see much of a difference. Over a few weeks you'll definitely notice that you can see some constellations that you couldn't see before and some constellations that you could see aren't there any more. This is because the Earth is moving around the Sun. As the Earth moves round in its orbit, the night side of the Earth (the side facing away from the Sun) faces out to different parts of space, where there are different constellations.

This means that you see different constellations in different seasons. Orion and Taurus are (Northern Hemisphere) winter constellations, because you can see them on winter evenings. Cygnus and Scorpius are (Northern Hemisphere) summer constellations, because you can see them on summer evenings.

Naming The Constellations

So who made up the constellations and their names? The earliest people on the Earth were hunters and gatherers. They looked up into the sky and saw shapes that were important to them - like Orion the Hunter. Much later in human history, English farmers looked up into the sky and saw the shape of a Plough. Russian peasants, looking at the same group of stars, called it Ursa Major or The Great Bear. People in France called it Le Casserole meaning the Saucepan. People in the USA called it The Big Dipper meaning a soup ladle. All of these different names are used today. The only people who have decided on one set of names for the constellations are the astronomers. For example, they always call the Plough 'Ursa Major', and never any of the other names. They had to do this so that they all knew what other astronomers across the world were talking about.

The stars in a constellation have nothing to do with each other; they can be very, very far apart, even if they appear to be right next to each other in the sky. Imagine looking up while standing in a street. You might see your hand next to a street light, which is next to the Moon, which is next to a planet, which is next to a star. All of these things are far away from each other, yet they can be next to each other when you look at them.

TUYENCONGCHUC.VN

If you like, you can look up into the sky, join the dots and make up your own constellations. Tell other people about your constellations. Maybe one day people all around the world will be using one of your constellation names!

Câu 858. What use for constellations is NOT mentioned in the opening paragraphs?

A. To allow people to orientate themselves

B. To provide entertainment

C. To understand the origins of life in the universe

D. To help people find their way

Câu 859. What is the best meaning of the word "sparse" in the second paragraph?

A. rare

B. boring

C. difficult

D. tough

Câu 860. Why do constellations change in the sky from month to month?

A. Because of passing fashions

B. Because of the weather

C. Because of the Earth's movements

D. Because stars are always moving

Câu 861. Why do astronomers call the constellation 'Ursa Major' by this name?

A. To ease international communication

B. Because Russia provides much of the finance for these organisations

C. They decided that's what it most looks like

D. Because the Russians insisted

Câu 862. What point is being made in the penultimate paragraph?

A. Stars used to be closer together

B. The stars look different depending on where you are standing

TUYENCONGCHUC.VN

C. You won't see stars well under street lights

D. Perspective makes stars seem closer

Câu 863. Where would you most likely find this text?

A. A children's encyclopedia

B. A political leaflet

C. A newspaper

D. A scholarly publication

If you can read a clock, you can know the time of day. But no one knows what time itself is. We cannot see it. We cannot touch it. We cannot hear it. We know it only by the way we mark its passing. For all our success in measuring the smallest parts of time, time remains one of the great mysteries of the universe. One way to think about time is to imagine a world without time. There could be no movement, because time and movement cannot be separated. A world without time could exist only as long as there were no changes. For time and change are linked. We know that time has passed when something changes.

In the real world, the world with time, changes never stop. Some changes happen only once in a while, like an eclipse of the moon. Others happen repeatedly, like the rising and setting of the sun. Humans always have noted natural events that repeat themselves. When people began to count such events, they began to measure time. In early human history, the only changes that seemed to repeat themselves evenly were the movements of objects in the sky. The most easily seen result of these movements was the difference between light and darkness.

The sun rises in the eastern sky, producing light. It moves across the sky and sinks in the west, causing darkness. The appearance and disappearance of the sun was even and unfailing. The periods of light and darkness it created were the first accepted periods of time. We have named each period of light and darkness: one day.

People saw the sun rise higher in the sky during the summer than in winter. They counted the days that passed from the sun's highest position until it returned to that position. They counted three hundred and sixty-five days. We now know that is the time Earth takes to move once around the sun. We call this period of time a year.

TUYENCONGCHUC.VN

Early humans also noted changes in the moon. As it moved across the night sky, they must have wondered: Why did it look different every night? Why did it disappear? Where did it go? Even before they learned the answers to these questions, they developed a way to use the changing faces of the moon to tell time. The moon was "full" when its face was bright and round and "new" when it was almost entirely dark. The early humans counted the number of times the sun appeared between full moons. They learned that this number always remained the same, about twenty-nine suns. Twenty-nine suns equalled one moon. We now know this period of time as one month.

Early humans hunted animals and gathered wild plants. They moved in groups or tribes from place to place in search of food. Then, people learned to plant seeds and grow crops. They learned to use animals to help them work, and for food. They found they no longer needed to move from one place to another to survive. As hunters, people did not need a way to measure time. As farmers, however, they had to plant crops in time to harvest them before winter. They had to know when the seasons would change. So, they were forced to developed calendars. No one knows when the first calendar was developed. But it seems possible that it was based on moons, or lunar months.

When people started farming, the wise men of the tribes became very important. They studied the sky. They gathered enough information so they could know when the seasons would change. They announced when it was time to plant crops.

Câu 864. Why is time such a difficult concept to understand?

A. it's not tangible

B. it's always moving

C. it's always changing

D. it's been misunderstood since pre-history

Câu 865. How were early humans able to begin measuring time?

A. by following the sun to the west

B. by counting the objects in the sky

C. by working both at night and during the day

D. the movements of objects they saw every day

TUYENCONGCHUC.VN

Câu 866. How did the concept of seasons become understood?

A. by noting the differences in temperature

B. with the introduction of early calendars

C. by tracking the sun's movements through the months

D. by measuring the length of the days

Câu 867. How would an early human have defined a 'month'?

A. the number of days between a full moon and a new moon

B. the number of days for the sun and moon to be seen together

C. the number of days from one phase of the moon's cycle and then back to the same point again

D. the number of days between eclipses of the moon

Câu 868. Why did the move towards farming require a better understanding of time?

A. so that crops were grown at the right time of the year

B. because they wanted to know when animals would give birth

C. because looking after animals required it

D. because they needed to have traditional celebrations at the same time every year

Câu 869. What is the meaning of the word 'forced' in the penultimate paragraph?

A. time became a lot more important

B. it was critical for survival

C. the wise men were given no choice

D. the crops wouldn't grow without the calendars

In the Himalayas there's an old Sherpa saying that, "There is a Yeti in the back of everyone's mind; only the blessed are not haunted by it." Many cultures have legends about solitary man-beasts, and recorded sightings in North America and Asia date back to the early 1800s. Despite numerous sightings, photos and footprints of often questionable origin, there has never been conclusive proof that these creatures exist. No droppings, no bones, no hair and no bodies found - alive or dead.

And this week, geneticists at the University of Alberta are putting the legend to the test as they scrutinise hair alleged to have come from Bigfoot. The results are due on Thursday. The hair was collected by residents in Teslin, Yukon, who claim to have found it in a massive footprint left behind by a 3m-tall human-like creature which walked through their gardens earlier this month.

Wildlife geneticist Dave Coltman expects that the hair will have come from a known mammal such as a bear or bison, but says he is curious enough to test this theory. "If Bigfoot is indeed a primate, then we would expect the sample to be closer to humans or chimpanzees or gorillas. That would be kind of cool, wouldn't it?"

Man-Beast Or Myth

Regardless of his findings, the myth of Bigfoot does not need hard facts to persist. The creatures are real enough to those who say they have spotted them, but opinion is divided on the nature of the beast. Some say it is flesh-and-blood; others, including various Native American tribes, believe it to be a spirit being which appears to humans in times of crisis. Ralph Gray Wolf, an Athapaskan Indian from Alaska, has told reporters that Sasquatch makes appearances to help troubled communities "get more in tune with Mother Earth", bringing a message that there is a need to change.

Nor are such creatures confined to the vast, isolated tracts of land in North America and Asia - in the UK, such legends date back centuries. Two years ago, investigators and the media descended on Bolam Lake, near Newcastle, following a spate of sightings of a tall, shadowy figure over the previous 18 months. In their week in the wooded, lakeside park, six of the party spotted the so-called Beast of Bolam. Richard Freeman, of the Centre for Fortean Zoology centre, says one of his colleagues was among the witnesses.

"What they saw was not Bigfoot, or Sasquatch as I prefer to call him; it was an enormous shadowy figure in the trees, more like a ghost than flesh-and-blood. In a park not far from a city centre, you're not going to get a nine-foot ape-like creature - England doesn't have the habitat to support it." His theory is that sightings such as this - and Scotland's Big Grey Man of Ben MacDhui and the Grey King in Wales - are of a paranormal being. "I don't mean that these are the ghosts of some creature which has died; I think it is more complex than that."

TUYENCONGCHUC.VN

In his time as a professional monster hunter, Mr Freeman has travelled the world gathering tales of weird and wonderful creatures - and in every culture, the same types crop up time and again. He calls it the "international monster template", which is made up of dragons and other huge reptiles; large ape-like creatures, such as Sasquatch and the trolls of Medieval Europe; little people, such as fairies and goblins; giant birds; and phantom dogs and cats. "I believe these are equivalents of the creatures which inhabited the plains of Africa millions of years ago, which our ancestors would have had to deal with. We now have a fossil memory of these creatures. Under certain conditions, the human mind creates 3D images of these equivalents."

Mind Games

Sceptics such as Benjamin Radford, of the Skeptical Inquirer magazine, also believe that such sightings are our minds playing tricks on us. For it is actually very easy to fool ourselves into believing what we want to believe. What often happens, he has said, is that out in the wilderness, in areas known as Bigfoot locations, someone will see something dark or hairy or fast out of the corner of their eye that startles them. "If they're already thinking that there's a Bigfoot in the area, it's easy to make the leap between saying: 'I saw something, I don't know what it is,' to: 'I saw something and it's Bigfoot.'"

As for the latest find, it will soon be known whether the hair is from a creature thus far unknown to science. And until then, the truth simply lies in the eye of the beholder.

Câu 870. What is the best meaning of the word "questionable" in the first paragraph?

A. dishonest

B. doubtful

C. invented

D. invisible

Câu 871. What would Dave Coltman find "cool"?

A. if the hair turned out to be human

B. if Bigfoot was genetically close to humans

C. if the residents had found real hair

D. if Bigfoot turned out to be a gorilla

TUYENCONGCHUC.VN

Câu 872. What is the meaning of the first sentence of the fourth paragraph, starting "Regardless of his findings..."?

A. you cannot call it a "myth" anymore

B. it is inevitable that Bigfoot will eventually be found

C. the Bigfoot legend persists despite a lack of real evidence

D. the Bigfoot legend exists due to so many sightings

Câu 873. Why does Richard Freeman say about the possibility of a UK-based Bigfoot?

A. Bigfoot can't live near cities

B. Bigfoot couldn't survive hidden in the UK

C. the UK is too cold for Bigfoot

D. the witnesses were possibly drunk

Câu 874. What is Mr Freeman's theory about why these creatures are seen around the world?

A. the animals have survived from Africa

B. we are mistaking dreams for reality

C. we are seeing 3D images of animals that live far away

D. our brains are programmed to see such creatures

Câu 875. What does Benjamin Radford believe people do when they are frightened?

A. invent more interesting stories to prevent embarrassment

B. see things that are not there

C. misunderstand magic tricks

D. tell lies about what they see

It is perhaps the most reproduced, recycled and ripped off image of the 20th Century. Che Guevara, his eyes framed by heavy brows, a single-starred beret pulled over his unruly hair, stares out of the shot with glowering intensity. It's now more than 50 years since the Argentine-born rebel was shot dead, so any young radicals who cheered on his revolutionary struggles in Cuba and Bolivia are well into middle age.

TUYENCONGCHUC.VN

But the image has been infinitely repeated - emblazoned on T-shirts and sprayed on to walls, transformed into pop art and used to wrap ice-creams and sell cigarettes - and its appeal has not faded. "There is no other image like it. What other image has been sustained in this way?" asks Trisha Ziff, the curator of a touring exhibition on the iconography of Che. "Che Guevara has become a brand. And the brand's logo is the image, which represents change. It has becomes the icon of the outside thinker, at whatever level - whether it is anti-war, pro-green or anti-globalisation," she says.

The unchecked proliferation of the picture - based on a photograph by Alberto Korda in 1960 - is partly due to a political choice by Korda and others not to demand payment for non-commercial use of the image. Jim Fitzpatrick, who produced the ubiquitous high-contrast drawing in the late 1960s as a young graphic artist, said he actively wanted his art to be disseminated.

"I deliberately designed it to breed like rabbits," he says of his image, which removes the original photograph's shadows and volume to create a stark and emblematic graphic portrait. "I was determined that the image should receive the broadest possible circulation," he adds.

For Ms Ziff, Che Guevara's murder also marks the beginning of the mythical image. "The birth of the image happens at the death of Che in October 1967," she says. "He was good-looking, he was young, but more than that, he died for his ideals, so he automatically becomes an icon."

The story of the original photograph, of how it left Cuba and was carried by admirers to Europe before being reinterpreted in Mr Fitzpatrick's iconic drawing, is a fascinating journey in its own right. Alberto Korda captured his famous frame on 5 March 1960 during a mass funeral in Havana. A day earlier, a French cargo ship loaded with ammunition had exploded in the city's harbour, killing some 80 Cubans - an act Fidel Castro blamed on the US. Korda, Fidel Castro's official photographer, describes Che's expression in the picture, which he labelled "Guerrillero Heroico" (the heroic fighter), as "encabronadao y dolente" - angry and sad. Unpublished, the picture was seen only by those who passed through Korda's studio, where it hung on a wall.

One man who brought the image to Europe was the leftist Italian intellectual, Giangiacomo Feltrinelli, who distributed posters across Italy in 1967. After that, Korda's photograph made an appearance in several European magazines. Mr Fitzpatrick first came across a tiny version of it in the German weekly. Only months later, when he finally got his hands on a larger version of the photograph, was he able to produce the image that has such universal appeal. "I'd got an original copy of the image sent to me by a guy involved with a group of Dutch anarchists, called the Provo."

After Che Guevara's death, an outraged Mr Fitzpatrick furiously reprinted originals of the poster and sent it to left-wing political activist groups across Europe. Part of his fury stemmed from vivid memories working behind a bar in Ireland as a teenager, and seeing Che walk in. The revolutionary was briefly exploring the homeland of his Irish ancestors during a stopover on a flight to Moscow. "I must have been around 16," Mr Fitzpatrick remembers. "It was a bright, sunny morning. I knew immediately who he was. He was an immensely charming man - likeable, roguish, good fun and very proud of being Irish."

Mr Fitzpatrick's version of Che arrived on the continent as many countries were in a state of flux, says Ms Ziff. "His death was followed by demonstrations, first in Milan and then elsewhere. Very soon afterwards there was the Prague Spring and May '68 in France. Europe was in turmoil. People wanted change, disruption and rebellion and he became a symbol of that change."

As time went on, the meaning and the man represented by the image became separated in the western context, Ms Ziff explains. But in Latin America, she points out, Che Guevara's face remains a symbol of armed revolution and indigenous struggle. Combining capitalism and commerce, religion and revolution, the icon remains unchallenged, Ms Ziff says. "There is no other image that remotely takes us to all these different places."

Stress is what people feel when they are uncomfortable about something that is happening. Many things can cause a person to feel stressed. A child can be worried about the test. A barking dog may scare someone who is not used to them. Someone else may feel stressed if something important, such as a library book has been lost. Stress is normal reaction that everyone feels at some point in life. Stress affects everyone in different ways. When there is stress, the brain sends out signals throughout the body and causes changes. Sometimes a person's heart beats faster or he or she breathes faster or even sweats. Stress can give someone a headache or a stomach ache. It can also make one sleep more or less than usual. A person under stress may want to eat a lot or not eat at all. Sometimes stress can make it difficult to focus at school or to control the way a person acts. Stress can stop on its own when the uncomfortable situation goes away. There are different ways to handle stress. One way is to talk to someone about one's feelings. Having someone to just listen can help, and helpful ideas on how to deal with the situation can be given. Another way to handle stress is to take good care of one's health by getting enough sleep, eating healthy foods, and doing exercise.

It is often considered that the schoolyard is where bullies go to make other kids a miserable school life, but a new study suggests that classrooms are another popular place.

The study, presented recently at the American Public Health Association's yearly meeting in Philadelphia, is based on the results of the research from more than 10,000 middle school students who answered questions online.

Of those researched, 43% said they had been physically bullied within the last month. A bit more than half said they had been laughed at in an unfriendly way, and half reported being called hurtful names. About one third said groups had excluded them to hurt their feelings; 28% said their belongings had been taken or broken; 21% said someone had threatened to hurt them. According to the results, two-thirds of the students said they had been bullied in more than one way over the previous month.

The study authors mentioned that 8% of the students who answered said they had missed school at least once during the school year because of fear of being bullied, 25% said they had taken other actions, such as missing recess, not going to the bathroom or lunch, missing classes, or staying away from some area of the school to escape from experiencing a bully. Bullies did too much to the school life.

My most favourite subject is English, which is today one of the most important languages and it is spoken and understood in all parts of the world.

English has become an international language for a variety of reasons. One of the most important of those is that the English people have been well-known for their knowledge of science, medicine, engineering, government and all other matters that are useful for the progress of the human race. It is thanks to the scientists of England that the motor-engine has become the most important machine in the world today.

The thirst for knowledge of the English scholars has contributed to the progress of man in almost all fields of his activity. Thousands of books have been written by such scholars on almost every subject that one can think of. Thus, people whose mother tongue is not English have learnt English with great interest as a means of acquiring knowledge of all human affairs.

As a result of this interest, English is used almost everywhere in the world. It is used in all the important meetings and conferences in the United Nations. It is also used in all leading universities in the world and in international trade and commerce. As it is used so widely, English has indeed become a very rich language. People of all the countries of the world have contributed new ideas and thoughts to this language. Thus, more and more new words are being created to make this language more and more useful for the communication of ideas and information among the peoples of the world.

The Maldives is a group of very small islands in the Indian Ocean, near Sri Lanka. It has the smallest population of any Asian countries. About 540.000 people live in the Maldives and most of them are on the capital island, Male. Male is different from the other islands in the Maldives because there is a small wall that goes around the whole island.

It is very easy to get around the islands. When you arrive on the airport island, you can take a dhoni and go to Male. This is a small boat used for transportation around the islands.

Dhoni Taxis go from the airport island to the capital island every fifteen minutes and after midnight every haft an hour. You can use these boats to visit other islands, too.

The Maldives is a popular place for scuba diving because there are many wonderful fish in the water to see. Also, the water is very clear so when you are under water you can see for more than 500 metres. There are many professional diving schools with instructors. They can speak many languages, so you can find someone to help you. Of course, that's not all you can do on these beautiful islands. You can go whale and dolphin watching, fishing, surfing, smoking, hiking or explore the towns.

Humans have a long history of eating insects, and it turns out that they can be a very nutritious part of a person's regular diet. Insects have a lot of protein, and they are often easier to catch than prey animals. Therefore, it is no wonder that when our ancient ancestors saw some tasty worms or grubs wiggling on the ground, they made a quick snack of them.

In Thailand, insects are a regular part of the street food that can be found. The different insects that people snack on are crickets, grasshoppers, giant water bugs, and assorted worms. They are often deep-fried and salted, so they have a crunchy texture that makes them a perfect snack food. If you can get past the fact that you are eating a cricket, it will crunch in your mouth just like a corn chip!

For a lot of people, however, it is difficult to get over the fear of eating insects. People tend to see insects as invaders, especially when they are crawling on the food that we are about to eat. Therefore, being able to eat insects without feeling disgusted is cultural. Some people cannot eat French cheese or stinky tofu because they weren't brought up doing so. To many of us, insects fall right into that category, making it difficult to even try them.

If given the chance, though, be courageous. Insects can be nutritious and tasty, so long as you can get over the "yuck" factor.

Câu 903. Which is the reason given for gathering and eating insects?
